

12 An object, immersed in a liquid in a tank, experiences an upthrust.

What is the physical reason for this upthrust?

- A The density of the body differs from that of the liquid.
- B The density of the liquid increases with depth.
- C The pressure in the liquid increases with depth.
- D The value of g in the liquid increases with depth.