

31 What is a correct statement of Ohm's law?

- A The potential difference across a component equals the current providing the resistance and other physical conditions stay constant.
- B The potential difference across a component equals the current multiplied by the resistance.
- C The potential difference across a component is proportional to its resistance.
- D The potential difference across a component is proportional to the current in it providing physical conditions stay constant.